Joe, K8OEF

911—A date (September 11) never to be forgotten due to the terrorist attack in New York—it truly was a national emergency.

This horrific tragedy has affected our entire nation—a very sad day in America — and throughout the world.

Say a prayer for all those innocent people that are no longer with us.

This country WILL bounce back and life will go on — drastically changed for a while—but will prevail.

God Bless America!

New Life For Your Old Magazines

Ken, N8KC

ANSWER THE following questions as honestly as you can: Is there a stack of 'treasured' old Ham magazines in your shack? (I'll bet there is.) If so, when was the last time you picked up and actually re-read an issue over 2 months old? (I'll bet it's been a long time—longer than you'd care to admit.) Has more than a little dust collected on your 'treasured' stack? (be honest!) Last question—Why are you saving them?

Hams have always been noted for being 'collectors' (in most circles that's just a nice word for 'pack-rat'). Many of us have all sorts of stuff stacked away in the dark recesses of our 'shacks' for use 'someday'. While many of those squirreled away items may indeed be of later use to your station or other radio endeavors, the information contained in your old magazines is far more likely to be 'time-sensitive' and decrease greatly in worth as the material ages. Sure—if you save them long enough, they might actually bring more than you paid for them—if you live that long. (And if you don't, your widow will toss them in the trash along with all those 'National Geographics' you've boxed up, all the while wondering why all those old magazines meant so much to you.)

Those magazines you hoard are like the loaf of bread you bring home from the store. The information inside the cover will get stale and moldy with age if not consumed within a short time. Although some of the information contained within is indeed timeless, a majority of the contents of any periodical unfortunately is not. Once you've read the magazine and absorbed its contents, is there a further use for the magazine or a reason to add it to your 'collection'? Is there a good reason not to photocopy the page or so of articles you find pertinent and instead hold onto a 95-page magazine? Would not your magazine serve our hobby better if its contents found its way into a few more hands and minds rather than sitting in a dark corner of your shack?

Well, here's a novel idea—why not give your magazines away in a way that furthers our hobby and helps our club? I haven't fulfilled my role as a Volunteer Examiner very often lately, but I found that a VE session was one of the best places to give away my QST, World Radio, USECA Express, Monitoring Times and other radio magazines. Prospective hams, new hams, and upgrading hams all seemed to really appreciate the 'freebie' magazines. It's a bit like rewarding them for their effort and I'm sure, for several, it was their 1st look at a magazine, catalogue, or newsletter dedicated entirely to Amateur Radio. I've used the same routine at swap—put a stack of magazines on your table (with USECA applications inside), label them 'FREE, one (or two) to a customer' and watch your table's business intensify. (Heck! it might even cause several of those customers to remember USECA's swap as one where they got a few freebies and return!). Got a neighbor or a kid down the street who's curious about radio? Use your old magazines as a recruitment tool and give him/her a few to pique their interest in Amateur Radio and suddenly, you're becoming an 'Elmer!' (again, don't forget the USECA application!) How 'bout taking those old magazines to a club meeting and offering 'first dibs' to a newly signed up members? Get inventive!

I think you've got the idea now—the only way to really get your moneys worth out of your old magazines is to ensure that they're read and re-read until they fall apart. Sure—save the important 'keepsake' issues, but photocopy the articles important to you instead of saving whole magazines and pass along the wisdom contained within. Just like that loaf of bread, fresh from the bakery, if the information in your magazines is not consumed, it'll turn stale and moldy and be of little use to anyone. Spread 'em around!

Listening to Ya!

Jim, K8FT

SITTING HERE in Taichung, Taiwan (the central part of the island) listening to Tom, W8NSF talking about the weather going through Missouri. It's just shy of midnight, Tuesday, 10-Apr. And Arp, WY8M jumping in there too. Sounds good to hear English as a first language for a change. It's very noisy in this particular equipment office so it's very difficult to hear who else is in there. Kinda like QRM, huh?

Well, I had my first fishhead last night at dinner and I gotta tell you it's NOT something I enjoyed. However, I did try it. Don't think I'll ever forget the experience of picking those eyeballs out of there. And since the host's wife had prepared them especially for my visit it made it difficult to refuse. But I DID pass on seconds.

On Saturday, 7-Apr I went into mainland China to Shenzhen. Boy did they freak out over my VX-5! Doesn't help matter any with the political situation being what it is right now. 5 hours and a request to call the US consulate later I was released (with my VX-5). Don't think I'll try that again.

Guess I better sign and get some work done. Thanks once again for the touch of home. Hope to talk to some of you soon.

73.
